Hey Jeff, I've had one of those T5 gearsets. How did you manage to only remove half the teeth?

I do think a stock T5 can take more than most people think if it's not power shifted. Power shifting them is almost sure to wind up with third gear looking like this, sooner rather than later.

I run a stock T5 behind a 408 and until this year raced it weekly. I do not power shift it and usually only broke the transmission on average about once a year. I don't think that's too bad. I can't see any reason it would ever break in street usage.
